

You're never too young to change the world

On November 18-19, please join the effort to fight climate change at the Governors' Climate Summit in Los Angeles, which will bring together leaders from around the world to find and implement new and creative solutions to address climate change through regional and global action.

California Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger along with other U.S. governors and internationally-recognized leaders from Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Indonesia, Mexico, the European Union are inviting young people from all over the world to engage via webcast in a two-day summit of high-level negotiations that will lay the groundwork for the next global agreement on climate change, which the United Nations will begin negotiating at a December meeting in Poland.

This Summit recognizes that:

- We must build and strengthen local, regional and international partnerships that advance greenhouse gas reduction strategies that both support global economic prosperity and protect natural resources.
- Young people across the globe have driven change on their campuses and in their communities and will continue to shape the world of tomorrow.
- The emerging climate policies at all levels of government need ensure that all regions and all people are responding to the climate change challenge and committing to future action.

On November 18-19, please join the effort to focus the world's view on the Governors' Climate Summit in Los Angeles and together we'll generate a paradigm shift in the climate change conversation as we move towards UN Negotiations and a new US Administration.

Tune in on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 18-19:
